Hann Resorts, Colliers host biz forum Talakad: Central Luzon's Economic Rise

CLARK FREEPORT -- Infrastructure developments that serve key areas outside of Metro Manila have been critical in stretching progress beyond the National Capital Region. One of these areas is Central Luzon, where ongoing new and massive real estate developments demonstrate the region's rapidly expanding local economy.

On April 23, leading global diversified professional services firm Colliers (NASDAQ, RSX: CIGI), in partnership with Hann Resorts, a South Korean-led investment firm and the name behind Hann Casino Resort, the first and only luxury integrated resort in Central Luzon, hosted a business forum to highlight the progress and prospects of this exciting region. Dubbed, "Talakad: Central Pascua Alcazar, president of Clark International Airport Corp.; and Maricar Bautista, spokesperson for business infrastructure of the Department of Transportation.

The forum also featured Agnes "Neki" Liwanag, VP for real estate and property development at Hann Philippines Inc., who shared the company's story from its humble beginnings in 2006 to what it has become today, a hotel, entertainment, and leisure powerhouse in Central Luzon and the name behind two exciting projects, Hann Casino Resort and Hann Reserve.

"Hann Philippines Inc. is a significant driver of economic growth in Central Luzon through its portfolio of luxury integrated lifestyle resorts. The established Luzon's Economic Rise," the event held at Clark Marriott Hotel featured engaging and insightful discussions with key government officials and private sector players.

Colliers director and head of research Joey Roi Bondoc presented an overview of Central Luzon's macroeconomy and property sector. This was followed by a panel discussion graced key government officials with first-hand knowledge of the region's economic and development prospects, including Rodem R. Perez, assistant VP for business enhancement of Clark Development Corp.; Kenneth Peralta, VP for investment promotions and marketing of the Bases Conversion and Development Authority; Joseph Hann Casino Resort in Clark Freeport Zone generates considerable tourism revenue and employment opportunities," Liwanag said.

"Furthermore, the expansive Hann Reserve in New Clark City is projected to amplify these economic benefits by attracting substantial investment and high-value tourism with its world-class amenities, including championship golf courses, international luxury hotels, a commercial center with a casino, and exclusive residential offerings, all while emphasizing sustainable development principles," she furthered.

The event's second panel discussion featured representatives from top developers who are making their mark in Central Luzon: Atty. Christopher Ryan Tan, CEO and president of Hausland; Nikki Gilladoga, general manager of Aeropark Development Philippines Inc.; Paolo Ilusorio, AVP of Filinvest Alabang Inc.; and Patrick John Avila, COO of AyalaLand Logistics Holdings Inc. The discussion was moderated by Colliers senior director and head of Capital Markets and Investment Services Julius Guevara.

According to Guevara, Pampanga is the pulsating heart of Central Luzon, a province ripe for more property development projects. "The significant levels of public infrastructure investment over the past few years coupled with the Luzon Economic Corridor initiative have set the stage for further growth in Central Luzon. This is already evident with regional and national developers launching massive vertical and integrated communities, which will likely further raise the attractiveness of new commercial, residential, industrial, and hotel and leisure projects in the region."

FIESTA Communities joins unveiling of Bataan's 'Monument of Resilience'

MARIVELES, BATAAN – Art, heritage, and progress converged as FIESTA Communities Inc. (FCI), a subsidiary of Hausland Holdings, Inc. (HHI), joined in unveiling the "Monument of Resilience" during the formal opening of the FAB Central Walk at the heart of the Authority of the Freeport Area of Bataan (AFAB) here on April 25.

Standing at the center of the FAB Central Walk, the monument symbolizes the unyielding spirit of the Bataan people, drawing inspiration from one of the province's most painful yet defining moments – the Bataan Death March. Despite the darkness of the past, the people of Bataan have consistently risen from the ashes and moved forward, making the province a beacon of strength, hope, and new beginning.

FAB Central Walk itself offers a vibrant and inclusive space for locals, investors, and visitors. With its commercial potential, FCI recognizes the value of FAB Central Walk in connecting people to key destinations and opportunities. The development is seen as a gateway for increased mobility, with potential to boost transportation access, tourism traffic, and commercial activity in the area.

The ceremonial program began with a welcome message from Jesus Russel Maninang, tourism department head of Mariveles, followed by historical reflections from Almario S. Rubia of the Municipal Historical Committee, anchoring the significance of the site in the province's resilient legacy.

Renowned artist Abdulmari "Toym" Imao, Jr., whose design now stands proudly as the featured monument, gave an impassioned introduction to the artwork. The piece honors not only history but also the forward-looking aspirations of the people and businesses who will bring life to this new space.

Mayor Ace Jello C. Concepcion together with Atty. Christopher Ryan Tan, CEO of HHI; Hussein P. Pangandaman, CEO and administrator of AFAB; and Bataan Gov. Jose Enrique S. Garcia III, shared messages of full support, emphasizing that Mariveles is ready for meaningful partnerships and development that elevate both infrastructure and people's lives.

FCI believes that the province is an ideal place to settle in. With developments at FAB Central, homeownership will come closer than ever for the locals of Bataan as it improves transportation linking key places to different FCI projects in the region specifically in Limay, Hermosa, Mariveles, and Abucay. Press release

GAME RESPONSIBLY KEEP IT FUN

To the Point

Keep our gaze on Christ

LET US remember that the election of a pope is not a political contest but a spiritual discernment. While it is natural to have hopes or preferences for certain personalities, we are ultimately invited to trust in the work of the Holy Spirit and the solemn responsibility entrusted to the College of Cardinals. The conclave is a sacred moment, guided not by popularity or strategy, but by prayer, humility, and the collective listening of the Church's shepherds to God's will.

Creating or sharing campaign videos, even with good intentions, risks turning a sacred discernment into a worldly spectacle. It may inadvertently pressure or politicize the conscience of the electors, and distract from the silence and prayer needed to truly hear the voice of the Spirit. Films and series about the conclave may be interesting, but let us not forget: they are fictional, deliberately sensationalized to be dramatic, entertaining, and profitable. They are far removed from the reverent and prayerful reality of the actual event.

Instead, let us accompany the electors with our prayers, not our preferences. Let us fast from speculation and feast on hope. Let us encourage one another to deepen our faith, trusting that the Lord—who has not abandoned His Church—will once again raise up a shepherd after His own heart.

Like Christ who is fully divine and fully human, so too is his Body, the Church. We must constantly ensure that its divinity is never eclipsed by the crassness of human powerplay, or obscured by traditional pomp and regalia that, though part of our history, are not always aligned with the essence and mission of the Church. These, too, require ongoing grounding and renewal, in response to the new pastoral challenges and emerging "signs of the times."

If we must speak, let us strive to speak words of encouragement, not endorsement. If we must share something online, let it be Scripture, reflections that edify, prayers that nurture faith, strengthen hope, and foster love—love that alone can bring about justice and peace, mercy and compassion, healing and reconciliation in our wounded world.

We found a role model for this in Pope Francis himself. To walk in his memory is to keep alive his spirit.

Above all, let us keep our gaze on Christ, the true Head of the Church, who alone can give us the Pope we need—not the one we think we want.

Reading Francis, hearing Marx

A NARRATIVE most narrow, given the broadest perspective; multi-hued but viewed from red-tinted lenses. That was my earliest take on the Petrine ministry of the Argentine Jorge Mario Bergoglio. So, I concede of this piece published on Dec. 3, 2013, nine months after he assumed the papacy.

Is the Pope Catholic?

HE DOES not believe in a "Catholic God."

He has attacked unfettered capitalism as "a new tyranny" – the enemy, verily assumed as the Devil himself.

On those matters alone, easily, if hastily, more Red than Black is the Jesuit Pope, Francis.

The unrepentant, aged communist in me makes the Argentine Bergoglio my kind of pontiff, with the gospel of Marx finding expression in the epistles of Francis. Das Kapital, indeed, The Communist Manifesto, extant in Evangelii Gaudium as well as in other papal pronouncements.

In the first apostolic exhortation in his Petrine ministry, Francis wrote: "Today everything comes under the laws of competition and the survival of the fittest, where the powerful feed upon the powerless. As a consequence, masses of people find themselves excluded and marginalized: without work, without possibilities, without any means of escape."

The comrade in me rises to the timelessness of the Manifesto: "The history of all hitherto existing society is the history of class struggles. Freeman and slave, patrician and plebeian, lord and serf, guild-master and journeyman, in a word, oppressor and oppressed, stood in constant opposition to one another, carried on an uninterrupted, now hidden, now open fight, a fight that each time ended, either in a revolutionary reconstitution of society at large, or in the common ruin of the contending classes."

Francis' very phrase "the powerful feed upon the powerless" finding its very definition in Marx's "Capital is dead labour, that, vampire-like, only lives by sucking living labour, and lives the more, the more labour it sucks."

The commodification of man, to Francis: "Human beings are themselves considered consumer goods to be used and then discarded. We have created a 'disposable' culture which is now spreading. It is no longer simply about exploitation and oppression, but something new."

Finding parallel to Marx's take on the reduction of the working man to mere beast of burden: "Political Economy regards the proletarian ... like a horse, he must receive enough to enable him to work. It does not consider him, during the time when he is not working, as a human being. It leaves this to criminal law, doctors, religion, statistical tables, politics, and the beadle."

What has come to be the very précis of Evangelii Gaudium: "Just as the commandment 'Thou shalt not kill' sets a clear limit in order to safeguard the value of human life, today we also have to say "thou shalt not" to an economy of exclusion and inequality. Such an economy kills..." smoothly segues to Marx's "(Capitalism) has resolved personal worth into exchange value, and in place of numberless infeasible chartered freedoms, it has set up that single, unconscionable freedom -- free trade. In one word, for exploitation, veiled by religious and political illusions, it has substituted naked, shameless, direct, brutal exploitation."

Francis spoke of a deceptive naivete that "Some people continue to defend trickle-down theories which assume that economic growth, encouraged by a free market, will inevitably succeed in bringing about greater justice and inclusiveness in the world."

Marx, putting it squarely: "A rise in the price of labour, as a consequence of accumulation of capital, only means, in fact, that the length and weight of the golden chain the wage-worker has already forged for himself, allow of a relaxation of the tension of it."

On the eve of the G8 Summit in Northern Ireland last June, Francis wrote its host, British Prime Minister David Cameron: "We have created new idols. The worship of the golden calf of old has found a new and heartless image in the cult of money and the dictatorship of an economy which is faceless and lacking any truly humane goal."

Marx's article "On the Thefts of Wood" in the journal Rheinische Zeitung says as much: "The representation of private interests ... abolishes all natural and spiritual distinctions by enthroning in their stead the immoral, irrational and soulless abstraction of a particular material object and a particular consciousness which is slavishly subordinated to this object."

So cried the Pope: "Money must serve, not rule!"

So Marx spoke: "If money is the bond binding me to human life, binding society to me, binding me and nature and man, is not money the bond of all bonds? Can it not dissolve and bind all ties? Is it not, therefore, the universal agent of separation?"

Exhorts Francis: "The Pope loves everyone, rich and poor alike, but he is obliged in the name of Christ to remind all that the rich must help, respect and promote the poor. I exhort you to generous solidarity and a return of economics and finance to an ethical approach which favours human beings."

Long conceded Marx, in a letter to his father: "If we have chosen the position in life in which we can most of all work for mankind, no burdens can bow us down, because they are sacrifices for the benefit of all; then we shall experience no petty, limited, selfish joy, but our happiness will belong to millions, our deeds will live on quietly but perpetually at work, and over our ashes will be shed the hot tears of noble people."

On that hopeful note, this piece could have ended right there. But, I take Francis for his word at the World Youth Day in Brazil, long past that age though I am: "Shake things up! Don't forget to make a mess..."

So, I go on.

Francis, still in Evangelii Gaudium: "While the earnings of a minority are growing exponentially, so too is the gap separating the majority from the prosperity enjoyed by those happy few. This imbalance is the result of ideologies which defend the absolute autonomy of the marketplace and financial speculation."

Marx, still in the Manifesto: "...in your existing society, private property is already done away with for nine tenths of the population; its existence for the few is solely due to its non-existence in the hands of those nine tenths. You reproach us, therefore, with intending to do away with a form of property, the necessary condition for whose existence is the non-existence of any property for the immense majority of society."

More than Francis, it is Jesus Himself that Marx may have channeled there: "If you want to be perfect, go, sell your possessions and give to the poor, and you will have treasure in heaven. Then come, follow me." (Matthew 19:21).

Christian perfection in concord with communism's core precept there.

Is the Pope Catholic? In Francis, the idiom takes other than its usual rhetorical sense.

Disbelieving – or should it be unbelieving – a Catholic God, a catholic pope is birthed in Francis. Ad maiorem Dei gloriam.

"Although the life of a person is in a land full of thorns and weeds, there is always a space in which the good seed can grow. You have to trust God." +POPE FRANCIS

Of graduation togas and “overdressed” parents

TWO RECENT incidents in separate year-end exercises have sparked widespread debate on a question that should have been a no-brainer at the get-go – what should graduating students and parents wear during the graduation ceremonies?

In Laua-an, Antique, a school principal was captured on video berating the senior high school students of Col. Ruperto Abellon National High School for supposedly violating a policy of the Department of Education. The students’ offense? They were wearing togas on top of their school uniforms.

She ordered the students to take off their togas, instructed the class advisers to list down the names of those who violated the graduation dress code, and even announced in a threatening manner that the students will have to claim their diplomas personally from her.

On the other hand, Bernadeth Flores Cutas had the entire social media world in mixed reaction with her video walking with her child’s during graduation while all glammed up in a white gown which many considered to be revealing and inappropriate.

In the case of the Laua-an school principal, the DepEd earlier clarified that while the school uniform is the prescribed attire for end-of-school-year rites, wearing of toga is not prohibited. In a Palace briefing on April 25, Presidential Communications Undersecretary Claire Castro has announced that DepEd Secretary Sonny Angara immediately acted on the issue and the teacher was removed as principal of the school.

As for the fashionista mom from Cebu, she immediately posted an apology in her social media account telling everyone it was never her intention to go viral or offend anyone during the school activity.

“Wala jud ko mag dahom mag viral ne. Salamat sa mga nag support og sa mga bashers. Salamat sad nenyo. Wala jud ko masuko nenyo, love2x mo nako tanan, en ana rako ka maayo og ka simple,” said Cutas in a Facebook post.

Many came to her defense, with some notable personalities volunteering to sponsor her gowns in her next events, while one offered an endorsement deal for his beauty products.

These two contrasting incidents did not only undermine the significance of the event but also highlighted two things: a breakdown in communication and leadership within educational institutions, and the double standards we set on parents who just want to be present and to be in their best during their child’s milestone events.

The principal’s approach to the situation, characterized by punitive measures rather than dialogue, reflects a lack of empathy and an authoritarian mind-set that disregards the emotional and cultural importance of the event to students and their families. Shaming the graduating class was her definition of discipline. Her actions serve as a cautionary tale about the dangers of overstepping authority without understanding the broader implications. Leadership in education should be about guidance and support, not power tripping.

Quite ironically but not surprisingly, it was the netizens, the kibitzers and the pundits who made a fuzz over the Cutas’s fashion ensemble – not her child, the school administrators or anyone from the school community.

Don’t you just find it odd and frustrating that we are required by default to be more considerate, understanding and respectful if parents cannot dress “properly” for their children’s graduation exercises? If we can be that magnanimous type of person who does not make an issue out of a parent wearing a round collar shirt, maong pants and slippers, why can’t we be the same person and be more appreciative of parents who want to look their best as they accompany their children in receiving their diplomas and awards?

At the end of the day, it all boils down to proactive communication and clear guidelines. Schools must engage with students and parents beforehand to establish expectations and address any concerns. By fostering open communication and mutual respect, schools can ensure that significant events like graduations are celebrated appropriately, honoring the achievements of students and the support of their families.

2025 Dinamulag Festival promises more

IBA, ZAMBALES -- “Once again, we bring out for everyone to see this proud celebratory tradition that is held every year. But more than anything else, we would like to highlight serious stakeholder efforts to improve production and marketing of the dinamulag mango to sustain the industry.” Thus, enthused Gov. Hermogenes Ebdane Jr. as he invited everyone to attend this year’s Dinamulag Festival, a spectacular celebration of the province’s most popular product, the “dinamulag” or carabao mango, which is hailed as one of the sweetest in the world. Ebdane Jr. said this year’s festival on May 21 to 24 promises more agro-cultural presentations and product shows laced with exciting sports events that bolster an ongoing program to further develop and promote the local mango industry. Malou Dungog

While Marcos Jr. said he recognized Congress' noble intention in crafting the bill, he said he could not ignore the concerns raised by the national agencies.

In his veto message dated April 24, and transmitted to both Houses of Congress, the president noted several issues with the enrolled bill, including the proposed increase of P100 billion in authorized capital, which he said could affect the government's fiscal integrity.

He said that the proposal to use the proceeds from the sale of the allocated lands from the ecozones to accrue mainly to the BCDA is inconsistent with the government's one-fund policy, limiting its fiscal flexibility in deciding fund utilization for more pressing concerns.

"In addition, the bill antithetically grants to the BCDA the authority to determine alienable and disposable lands, which clearly falls under the mandate of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources," Marcos Jr. said.

At the same time, he said the bill's language granting land ownership and authority to the BCDA in disposing of lands contradicts Republic v. Heirs of Bernabe, which provides that the state is the beneficial owner of the lands transferred to the BCDA by virtue of Republic Act No. 7227.

Inclusive communities
The proposed amendments to RA 7227 as encapsulated in House Bill 8505 and Senate Bill 2647 had earlier received the support of several business groups based in Central Luzon citing the measure's role in creating more inclusive communities and in spurring economic growth in the region and the country.

SB No. 2647 was seen to give workers access to affordable housing, accelerate infrastructure development, further drive investments in the country, and support the pension fund of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

Under the bill, a certain percentage of the land area of each BCDA economic zone shall be declared as alienable and disposable, authorizing its sale for residential use, mixed use, industrial, and institutional purposes.

"With our properties, such as Clark, John Hay, Poro Point, and Morong Discovery Park on the cusp of economic transformation, we urgently need to overcome legislative challenges that may hinder the optimum potential of these economic zones. More importantly, we seek to empower the workforce that drives the success of these business hubs by allocating a portion of our land for residential purposes." So enthused BCDA president and CEO Joshua Bingcang then.

If passed, the bill is seen to mobilize residential and affordable housing development in BCDA ecozones, which is currently prevented by the leasehold status of the properties.

"This would benefit workers who usually need to live and commute outside the BCDA ecozones, providing them convenience and affording them the opportunity to own a property that they can pass down to their children or family members," the BCDA said in a statement at the time.

Exclusive enclaves
On the contrary, groups opposed to the BCDA charter amendments, notably advocates of indigenous peoples' rights had expressed fears that opening the former base lands to private ownership would "redound to exclusive enclaves of the rich and powerful to the utter loss of the nation's patrimony."

The group cited a press statement of the BCDA itself that said the proposed amendments "also met tremendous support from the BCDA's partners, including Ayala Corp., Megaworld Corp., Filinvest Land Inc..." which they said are "all big-time developers."

The bill which also seeks to extend the BCDA's corporate term by another 50 years from its current remaining corporate life of 18 years, is "much-too-much leeway for a government corporation that had long achieved its level of incompetence," a member of the group said.

As referenced by the Peter Pinciple, "level of incompetence" is that point at which corporate abilities are no longer sufficient to perform the tasks expected of them in a given role or context. Punto News Team/PCO-PR

Sweet, soulful...

"I appreciate all his teachings," Garcia said, eyes soft with memory as she pressed the dough into shape.

She speaks of Lolo Kiko, a term Filipinos use to affectionately refer to the Pope who is not just as a spiritual leader, but as a figure of hope who stood beside her country during a time of grief.

"When he came to the Philippines, we were struggling. He was there for us, not with fanfare, but with presence. Just him being there gave us strength," Garcia recalled.

But it wasn't just his visit that touched Garcia. It was his message of love, of compassion, of radical acceptance. His outspoken embrace of LGBTQ Catholics struck a chord with her, one she now bakes into each cookie with purpose.

The cookies themselves are as thoughtful as their story: sugar cookies finished with wafer prints on fondant, each delicately decorated with symbols of Pope Francis's humility and grace. They're simple, but not plain; sweet, but deeply soulful.

In Garcia's kitchen, every batch tells a story. Lolo Kiko Cookies are more than dessert because they're edible tributes, blending faith, flavor, and heartfelt memory.

(IFC), a member of the World Bank Group.

EDGE is a green building certification system developed by the IFC and used in more than 170 countries. It is designed to help building professionals identify affordable strategies to reduce energy use, water consumption, and the embodied energy in building materials.

EDGE demonstrates that sustainable design is not only environmentally responsible but also financially viable.

Based on the certification assessment, Clark's New Passenger Terminal Building is projected to achieve 21% savings in energy, 26% savings in water, and a 54% reduction in embodied energy in materials compared to a standard local base case.

"This certification proves that we can offer world-class comfort and efficiency without compromising our commitment to the environment," enthused

Noel Manankil, president and CEO of the Luzon International Premiere Airport Development Corp. (LIPAD), operator of Clark International Airport.

The terminal's EDGE-certified design incorporates several sustainability features. These include high-performance glass, an insulated roof, a demand-controlled ventilation system, and smart metering technologies for optimized energy use.

Water efficiency is achieved through the installation of low-flow water closets and urinals. In terms of materials, the building uses low-impact construction components such as in-situ reinforced concrete floor slabs, aluminum-clad sandwich roof panels, pre-cast concrete exterior walls, and medium weight hollow concrete blocks.

This milestone further cements CRK's reputation as the premier gateway and highlights its role in advancing national development.

"Congratulations to us, culinary capital or not. Tuloy-tuloy tayo. It's part of our heritage—dapat ipasa natin lalo na sa mga kabataan," she said.

The exposition brought together culinary treasures from across the province.

From the 1st District, attendees indulged in the sizzling pork sisig from Angeles City, the comforting putong babi of Mabalacat City, and the bulanglang babi from Magalang.

The 2nd District offered a unique culinary spread that included the tender asadong dila from Sta. Rita, the crispy Galans chicharon of Guagua, the hearty sabo bule from Floridablanca, the flavorful sale manuk of Lubao, the savory gisang pugang panas from Porac, and the rich tortang alima-sag of Sasmuan.

Meanwhile, the 3rd District delighted guests with pindang damulag served with pacu salad from the City of San Fernando, the iconic Kabigting's halo-halo of Arayat, baldesadong dila paired with puto seko from Bacolor, and adobong balut from Sta. Ana.

The 4th District impressed with a fusion of tradition and innovation through dishes like beef kare-kare from San Simon, the native rice dish birinok of Sto. Tomas, toytotang manuk from Minalin, the rustic kubang itik of Apalit, Cajun seafood boil with garlic butter sauce from Masantol, rellenong alimango of Macabebe, the savory lagat hitu from Candaba, and the sweet bibingka nasi of San Luis.

"This exposition is a tribute to the culinary artistry of the Kapampangan people. It's not just about food—it's about identity, tradition, and pride," said Mike Castañeda, head of the Pampanga Arts, Culture, and Tourism Office.

Cultural pride and entertainment elevated the opening celebration, with standout performances by Miah Tiangco, Grand Winner of The Clash 2019, and Arti Sta. Rita, a MOKA awardee for Performing Arts.

Adding further vibrance to the event is a three-day agri-business trade fair designed to empower local farmers, agri-entrepreneurs, and artisans by showcasing homegrown produce, culinary innovations, and sustainable initiatives.

With food, culture, and community at its core, the Manyaman Festival continues to be a delicious and meaningful celebration of what it truly means to be Kapampangan.
